

Living Missional Generosity

Each year there are special days designated to remind us of our work as Christ's people to build the kingdom of God and ensure that all of creation can experience abundant life. Below are some of the days (though definitely not all) that can invite us to remember, reflect, and respond. These days are invitations for us to do four things: learn, pray, give, act.

For each day that we encounter you are invited to explore the groups working on each issue. Learn about them and their work, pray for God to continue to strengthen and sustain their important work, give if you can, and participate in any actions that they provide. There are many organizations working on each issue, far too many to name here. Below are ones that I trust and believe in and feel confident in sharing with you. Some organizations are named multiple times; all deserve our continued support.

There are also many other special days of recognition that are not named here and perhaps should be. The following days, weeks, and months of recognition are ones that have come from my own convictions of faith. My hope is that this is simply an invitation into a more generous and justice seeking way of life for all of us. It is a place to begin but not to end.

Throughout the year you will be invited to learn, pray, give, and act in the following areas: Human trafficking, education access, relieving medical debt/bills, protecting endangered animals, creation justice and care, clean drinking water, literacy, global health, economic justice, ministry with communities of color, refugees, immigrants, human rights and more.

I have included days and themes that are a part of my faith journey and my rule of life. There is much more out there than included here. I hope these days will inspire you to find other ones that connect to you and your journey.
